C. Pediatric care

The children's clinic provides care for children under the age of 14 and, on request, for children between the ages of 14 and 18. There are 4 children's clinics in Tiszaújváros

In addition to the tasks of a general practitioner, the tasks of a child's general practitioner are: Basic curative and preventive care for infants and children. Preventive visits for neonates, vulnerable infants and children as needed. Medical examination prior to admission to children's institutions.

For the benefit of our patients, we ask for the involvement of parents

Injections, wound dressings, travel vouchers, previous findings, and perform other administrative tasks for subsequent uninterrupted patient care.

Home care for a sick child will be provided outside of the appointment period after prior consultation with the parent.

If possible, infectious and new patients are brought in the first half of the order so that we can take care of those recovering for the second half of the order, thus avoiding the risk of overinfection.

Please recall the recovery of patients who are recovering even if they feel that they are no longer necessary due to the child's good condition. If the child's condition does not improve sufficiently, come back earlier.

Newborns are first visited at home by their doctor within 6 days of returning home. Later, under the guidance of the nurse and doctor, the date of the counseling may change individually, if the parent sees a need, he or she can visit the counselor without calling. Infant and child counseling in a separate corridor, only for the care of healthy children, a sick child should not be taken to the counseling for the benefit of other children

Human dignity must be respected during care, and only the interventions necessary for the patient's care may be performed. Personal liberty may be restricted only in justified cases.

During the care, the clothing may be removed only for the time necessary and only to the extent justified, taking into account the sensation of shame.

- Right of contact

The patient in the hospital should be given the opportunity to keep in touch with relatives and to receive visitors. In the meantime, of course, you have to take into account the institutional conditions and policies, and the contact should not interfere with patient care or your patients.

During hospital care, your relative may be present next to him or her if he or she is severely ill or if he or she is a minor. The parent woman has the right to do so during labor and childbirth. And after giving birth, you have the right to be placed in the same room with your newborn - unless there is a medical reason against it.

The patient has the right to practice his religion freely and to have contact with the appropriate church person. You are usually entitled to use your own clothes and personal belongings.

- Right to leave the institution

This right of the patient may be restricted only if the physical integrity and health of others is endangered or if this is required by law. Prior to discharge from hospital, the patient or relative should be notified as far as possible 24 hours in advance. In the case of voluntary departure at one's own risk or without prior notice, the method of departure must be recorded in the patient record.

- Right to information

The patient has the right to receive complete, detailed, personalized information about his / her health condition, the proposed examinations and interventions, the possible benefits and risks of performing or not performing them, and the planned dates. You can ask questions about these. You can find out the results of the tests and interventions, and their possible failure.

You can ask for the names, qualifications and positions of those directly involved in your care.

The patient may request that his or her relative receive the necessary information.

- The right to self - determination

Everyone is free to decide whether to seek health care, to accept the proposed interventions or to reject them - they can take part in decisions about their care.

Consent is not required if there is an imminent threat to life.

- Right to refuse benefits

The patient has the right to refuse health care if the failure to provide health care does not endanger the physical integrity or life of others. You must make a refusal in writing if the lack of care is expected to cause serious or permanent damage.

A life-saving or life-sustaining intervention may be refused only in the presence of an incurable and fatal disease and only before a separate medical committee, as prescribed by law. The statement of refusal may be withdrawn by the patient at any time.

- Right of access to medical records

The patient may request a description of the information contained in the medical documentation and may request that it be supplemented or corrected. The documentation is available to the healthcare provider, but the data is available to the patient. Anyone can request a copy of any of their finds at their own expense.

- The right to medical confidentiality

The patient may indicate the person who can be informed about the hospitalization, his / her state of health, its change, the expected outcome of his / her illness, and has the right to exclude anyone from this.

What are the responsibilities of patients?

They are required to work with the health professionals involved in their care to provide information on everything needed to diagnose the disease, prepare a treatment plan, and perform interventions. They are obliged to comply with the provisions relating to medical treatment.

In exercising their rights as a patient and their relatives, they are obliged to respect the rights of other patients and not to violate the statutory rights of healthcare workers.
